Crown College (https://crown.ucsc.edu/) at the University of California, Santa Cruz (UCSC) invites applications for an ongoing pool of part-time Lecturers to teach sections of College 1, the first course of UCSC’s Academic Literacy Curriculum, which launches in fall 2018. College 1 is a required core course designed to help students develop academic and civic proficiency in reading and critical thinking. Students will develop understanding of “academic ethos” and habits of mind and practice that are tied to a sense of belonging and academic success. This course prepares students for success in other UCSC courses. There is no placement exam for College 1; enrollment in this course is not tracked by proficiency in reading, writing, or critical thinking.

Instructors meet with a seminar of about thirty students two or three times per week and present material from an established syllabus; assign and evaluate student work; meet with students in small groups; prepare grades, which may include narrative evaluations of student performance; hold weekly office hours; and carry out other typical instructional duties.

Crown College’s focus for College 1 is the ethical and societal implications of technological development. We will look at how technological revolutions happen, how they transform societies, and how these changes generate new ideological narratives. A component that is unique to Crown will be a group research project exploring the historical, economic, and ethical context of a technology of choice.

Applicants with any of the following qualifications are strongly encouraged to apply:

- Ph.D. (or equivalent foreign degree)
- Demonstrated record of working effectively with students from a wide range of social, cultural, and academic backgrounds
- Familiarity with current theory and research in critical and analytical reading
- Familiarity with current theory and research in the areas of literature, philosophy, sociology, or related discipline
- Professional expertise in the area of liberal arts or a record of creative or research activity
