

Using Recruitment Advertising Agencies

What Are They? - Professional agencies that specialize in designing and placing recruitment advertising.

What Are the Advantages of Using Their Services?

- Professional Looking Ads
Graphic designers at the recruitment ad agencies take your text and turn it into display ads for professional journals, newspapers, and most any print media. They can even incorporate graphics such as the UC seal or lines and borders into your ads.
- Save Time
Graphic designers at the agencies know or will get the advertising specifications for almost any source. They do the measuring and fit the text into the ad size that you designate. Or they can suggest the best ad orientation and size for you.
- Quick Turnaround
Most agencies can design an ad and have it placed within 2-3 working days – most will provide same-day service whenever possible.
- No Additional Costs to You
Your cost of the ads is the same whether you place them yourself or use an agency. Usually there is no charge for the ad design and placement service. Publications typically give the ad agencies a 15% reduction in rate because they supply camera-ready ads to be published. This is how the agencies make their money. Note: Some agencies charge a placement fee for submitting ads to free or low-cost web sites.
- Single Invoice
The agencies place the ads, pay for them, and then send you a single, itemized invoice. This reduces the number of CruzBuy or ProCard transactions that you need to process.
- Advertising Suggestions
If asked, ad agencies will often provide suggestions of where other similar positions have been posted. They will also work with you to stretch your advertising dollar.
- Later Deadlines
Because they supply camera-ready ads, some agencies have later deadlines with certain publications.

What Are the Disadvantages of Using Their Services?

- Service Charge for Free Postings
Some recruitment advertising agencies charge a fee ($15-$50) to place ads in free or low cost web sites. Ask up-front what the charges will be.
- Copies of Ads
Although all agencies will provide you with copies of ad proofs (“tearsheets”) or screen shots of online ads, you may have to remind them to send these to you.

Do They Know About Higher Education?

Several recruitment advertising agencies have specialized in placing announcements for positions in higher education, including faculty, administration, research, and staff positions. The Academic Personnel Office currently works with one of these agencies, Jobelephant, for ad placement in our standard outreach locations. APO has also used Graystone Group Advertising in the past, and Ad Club is an agency that has recently offered its services to UCSC, although they do not specialize in academic recruitments alone.

Jobelephant

Jobelephant was founded in 2000, as an advertising agency specializing in recruitment. They have developed a good understanding of the higher education community recruitment needs. APO uses them for most ad placements and has received excellent service from Jobelephant.

Pros – Located on the West Coast. There is no charge for any of their services – they will place as many online ads as you request without a service charge. They routinely provide tearsheets and screen shots with the invoice. They will suggest advertising venues (and associated venue pricing) and work up a media plan at no cost.

Cons – Since they do a large volume of advertising for many clients, posting of ads may sometimes take up to 2 days. If you have a rush to post immediately, it would be a good idea to mention this when placing your order.

Graystone Group Advertising

800-544-0005

Graystone has been active in advertising academic positions since 1987. APO used Graystone in the past to design and place ads for administrative searches.

Pros – The designers were very professional and had relationships with all of the professional journals and major newspapers that we used. Turnaround times were 1 day or same-day. They were able to get reduced ad prices in large journals such as Science by tracking that UCSC had placed multiple ads in a single year.

Cons – Graystone is located on the East Coast, so you need to factor in the time difference. They charge $25 to place ads on web sites or in journals where the fee is less than $150. It was difficult getting copies of tearsheets or online screen shots.

Ad Club Advertising

800-333-1228

Ad Club Advertising Services, founded in 1987, specializes in recruitment advertising. Ad Club is one of the original agencies with a long history of working with colleges and universities all across California and beyond.

Pros – Located in Modesto, CA. Ad Club bills itself as the foremost expert for online job boards, social media, specialty trade journals and newspapers. Ad Club notes that it is known for the quickest turnaround in the industry and can help get ads posted before deadline. Free resources include: expert media advice for any discipline and comprehensive design services for recruitment flyers, brochures, marketing materials, and print ads.

Cons – Ad Club is new to working with UCSC. Please contact them about specific charges for some sites, and for any special advertising needs.

If you use a recruitment advertising agency, please send comments on your experiences to Leslie Marple in APO (lesliem@ucsc.edu) so that we can update our ratings of these agencies.
